The passing parade

BY FRANK GEORGE

WITH AN electorate that can be as unpredictable as a riptide, newcomer Fran Farina sent incumbent Paul Davis adrift in Nov. 5th's water board election.

"I'm just overwhelmed with joy," Farina said, still glowing from the news. "I intend to be a strong voice for residents and small businesses in the community."

"I'm still trying to sort it out," a gloomy Davis declared. "I hope Fran Farina does well. She certainly seems to have the energy."

Farina took a strong second in the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors race. Her 8,710 votes (as of the Nov. 6 unofficial count) earned her a four-year seat along with incumbents Dick Heuer and Jim Hughes.

Three four-year seats and one two-year term were up for grabs in the election. Heuer received 9,720 yeses and Hughes tallied 7,396. Heuer netted 23.5 percent of the voters, while Farina was favored by 21 percent and 18.2 percent liked Hughes.

The 28.3 percent turnout bested the 22 percent that was recorded county-wide. In Carmel, the immediate reaction from two prominent residents was as different as chalk and cheese.

Carmelite Howard Nieman expressed disappointment in Davis's defeat and Farina's subsequent election. He said Davis's experience in architecture and land use planning was a valuable asset to the board that will be missed.

Meanwhile, Clayton Anderson of the Carmel Residents Association (CRA) was pleased with the results.

"We think she represents the resident's viewpoint on water issues and we're very pleased to see her elected." The CRA had backed Farina and Heuer for the four-year seats, while endorsing incumbent Ken Long for the two-year opening.

Long captured an overwhelming 57 percent of the voting populace in his bid for re-election. His 7,914 votes almost doubled Jeff Grover's 4,420 (31.8 percent) total.

"The sad thing about elections is the fact that there are losers and winners," Long said. "(But) it's not a good time to tread water. We have a lot of work to do."

On the other hand, Heuer was elated by the vote of confidence. The front-runner said he's looking forward to the next four years, which he hopes will be very revealing.

"I think we'll really find out which direction we're going in solving the water supply problems," Heuer predicted. He said the projected finalizing of the new dam's EIR/EIS in June would clarify one of those directions.

Aside from the others, Joe Noto made a strong showing in the four-year seat contest. The Carmel Valley resident obtained a respectable 10.2 percent with a 4,243 count.

Minor candidates Michael Bogatriev (2,179 votes, 5.2 percent) and Timotheus Grady (1,521 votes, 3.6 percent) rounded out the four-year field Russ Farrer wound up with 1,544 votes and 11.1 percent in his bid for the two-year slot.

Fort Ord Task Force to meet in Carmel

THE FORT Ord Community Task Force will hold another in a series of public meetings at 4 p.m. Friday, Nov. 8, in Carmel City Council Chambers, Rep. Leon E. Panetta (D-Monterey) announced.

Agenda items include: A report from Congressman Panetta on Congressional activities; a report on Task Force activities by staff coordinator Lt. Gen. James Moore (USA Ret.); a report from the Task Force's Utilities and Infrastructure Advisory Group; comments from the public.

Report on commercial zoning offers novel suggestions

By DAVID LELAND

A RECENTLY released study on Carmel's commercial district offers an innovative look at suggestions aimed at modernizing the city's zoning regulations.

Copies of the report are available at city hall, with the Carmel Planning Commission set to hear public testimony during its meeting at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 13.

"The past should be used as a guide to reveal...elements of form and function that support social and cultural values while still supporting the modern realities of city development," said Brian Roseth, city planner, in a preface to the study.

Perhaps the most radical element of the 10-page document centers on eliminating the Service Commercial (SC) district, one of the three commercial zones currently governing the area of Ocean Avenue and its environs.

"Just as the city has not been successful in encouraging resident serving businesses, the SC district has not satisfied its intent to primarily serve local needs," according to the report. "The greatest number of non-conforming uses exist in this zone. In the years since the zoning was adopted, the number of non-conforming uses has not been reduced."

Instead, under new regulations, the commercial district would be composed of a central area and buffer zone. Such a delineation, the study suggests, would alleviate unfair boundaries.

"Scarcity of space for certain uses creates a monopoly and drives the rents higher, which eventually effects all properties," said the report, referring to zoning lines that may allow a use in one store but make the same use illegal next door. "Zoning boundaries do create artificial distinctions."

Under current regulations, the planning commission's hands are tied concerning the issuance of non-conforming use permits, despite what often appears to present a hardship to the applicant.

The current study is the result of the planning commission's Sept. 26, 1990 denial of a property owner's request to rezone property in the commercial district.

During that same meeting, the commission passed a motion requesting direction from the Carmel City Council to initiate a comprehensive study of the commercial zone.

In December of 1990, the council adopted a work program for a study of the commercial district. Objectives were:

- To determine if the zoning provisions are carrying out the general plan.
- To consider if uses in the commercial district should be expanded. Currently the types of businesses allowed in the commercial zone are severely regulated.
- Identify ways that allowed uses could be identified in a simpler method.

The planning commission conducted eight public meetings and received 38 letters, plus conducted a mail survey of businesses.

Possible changes ahead

A total of seven recommendations are offered up for public consideration in the study. Highlights include:

- Eliminate the concept of "resident serving businesses" from the general plan and land use code. Instead, an emphasis should be placed on enticing "quality" businesses to the area.

"A clear established formula that distinguishes a use as either visitor or resident serving is impossible to establish," the study said. "The increase in the number of apparel stores from 1990 to 1991 is an example of this artificial dis-

Amazed and puzzled!

Dear Editor:

Prices are going up and up. Christmas is coming. Within one week calendars went up one dollar. We are told top eat more fruit and vegetables. These as well as groceries are going up also.

The needs are great for charities of all kinds, especially health problems. Other needs such as libraries, schools, the Red Cross, and the Salvation Army need that extra cash now, especially the care for the homeless.

All services such as auto repair, beauty shops, cleaners to mention a few are also increasing in cost.

How long can this go on?

A sad occurrence

Dear Editor:

A sad thing happened and I'm sorry to report this, but I think this should be looked at.

My husband's secretary answered the phone and a female voice said, "You cheap Jews."

I think this has to be addressed on many levels.

First, my husband is not Jewish. I am. Therefore, if this person thinks he's cheap it proves it's not always a Jew.

Second, If there's something unfinished that needs to be worked out, there is a better way, and most importantly, this person and people who think like this know who they are, and someday I hope they realize that every faith is God's faith.

It comes down to research

Dear Editor:

Three weeks ago I read a letter authored by Chuck Poland about the Mission Ranch Restaurant (Oct. 10). I read the letter, as I do all the letters, with an open mind. I couldn't help but notice that the way he attacked Gary Tate was demeaning to his character. The Constitution guarantees freedom of speech, as well it should. But caliing Tate names simply because he is doing his duty is, in my mind, out of line.

Being the retired CEO of a large corporation, I know the importance of staying on an even keel, even with your adversaries. I didn't accomplish my success by demeaning people in the way you have.

It may be difficult to have an open mind, especially on a matter that you feel strongly about. But by the same token, you need not take potshots at a man who is doing his job.

What it comes down to is research. We are all responsible to research a problem and come to the best solution possible, weighing all the variables. This is true for the head of a company to the first-time employee.

In your parting comment you talked about tax revenue and who is losing it. Sorry to tell you this Mr. Poland, but the Mission Ranch Restaurant is not in the City of Carmel, it is in the County.

Research. . .

A warning

Dear Editor:

Bob Gross, Chairman of the Santa Clara Valley Water District Board of Directors, reports that they are under orders of the California State Regional Water Control Board to eliminate the dumping of fresh wastewater into the southern end of the San Francisco Bay because it is destroying the saline habitat required by some animals and plants. Plans are under way to solve the problem by creating a lake from the treated wastewater.

This should be a warning to the Carmel Area Wastewater District, which is already having serious problems satisfying the State Water Quality Control Board regarding the quality of their discharge, and the Pebble Beach Community Services District that in the not-too-distant future the dumping of wastewater into the Carmel Bay will be severely restricted and eventually eliminated.

One-and-a-half-million gallons of fresh wastewater are currently being dumped into the saline habitat of the Carmel Bay each and every day. Yet the plans for the current reclamation project of the CAWD and the PBCSD provides only 2.5 million gallons of storage. In the summer months there will not be enough for the golf courses and precious potable water will be required. In the winter months, when wastewater is not needed for the golf courses and the proposed storage tank is full, additional wastewater will be dumped into the Carmel Bay Sanctuary.

It is hoped that additional storage will be provided for the project before the final plans are considered for approval by the Coastal Commission. Sawmill Gulch at the southeast corner of the S.F.B Morse Drive and Congress road would be an ideal 60 million gallon reservoir and a beautiful lake. Although legal steps may be necessary to make it available, the reduction in the waste water that is being dumped into the Carmel Bay and the availability of wastewater for its myriad of uses, not only in Pebble Beach but also in the surrounding communities, would be worth it.

Reflecting on nomination

Dear Editor:

Some reflections on Justice Clarence Thomas' nomination and confirmation to the Supreme Court:

I don't know Justice Thomas personally, and he certainly has never been convicted of a crime. Under our system of law, he must be considered innocent. Therefore, Justice Thomas can only be judged by his record as a public official.

From 1984 to 1988, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission allowed over 13,000 age discrimination claims to die on the vine, due to the expiration of the statute of limitations. The chairman of the EEOC at the time was Clarence Thomas.

When questioned about this in 1987 by the Senate Special Committee on Aging, Thomas testified that only 70 such cases had expired. Soon after, he revised the number to 779. Then, he revised again to 1,600, and once again to 7,500, and finally he confessed that indeed, over 13,000 age discrimination claims had expired.

Here are the conclusions drawn by Sen. David Pryor, chairman of the Aging Committee: "Through management or through disdain, Thomas has been responsible for allowing thousands of age discrimination claims to lapse. The rights of American citizens were denied and snuffed out, literally snuffed out, by a bureaucracy that was run by Clarence Thomas."

I have drawn my conclusions, and of course you may draw your own.

I have one more reflection on this process.

I don't know Sen. Edward Kennedy personally, and he certainly has never been convicted of a crime. Under our system of law, he must be considered innocent. Therefore, Sen. Kennedy can only be judged by his record as a public official.

If that last paragraph sounds familiar, I refer you to the second paragraph of this letter. I am sure that my fellow Americans who wholeheartedly agreed with the second paragraph of this letter must surely agree with the latter paragraph.

To do otherwise would indicate a fundamental lack of respect or understanding with our American system of justice.

In other words, we can't have it both ways.

The highest calling

MONDAY, NOV. 11, is Veterans Day, a holiday set aside to honor the men and women who have served our nation with honor. They earned the right to be called "veterans" by their sacrifice and devotion to duty in some of the darkest hours our nation has known.

This holiday should certainly salute the newest generation of veterans— the men and women of Operation Descrt Storm. Just a year ago, American forces were joining those of more than two dozen other nations to meet the challenge of an aggressor and eventually restore a tiny nation's sovereignty.

The American veterans of Operation Desert Storm/Desert Shield displayed the same valor and dedication to the defense of freedom that previous generations had shown at Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood . . . at Normandy and Iwo Jima . . . at Inchon and the Pusan Perimeter . . . at Khe Sanh and Pleiku . . . in thousands of jungle firefights . . . wherever their country called for their service.

As this world races toward the end of the 20th Century, we are seeing great changes in international attitudes and relationships. The Iron Curtain is no more. Millions have thrown off the yoke of communism and eagerly seek governmental systems that recognize the dignity of the individual.

The rush to reduce nuclear warfare capability seems to herald an era when nations will resolve their differences through negotiation, rather than armed conflict. Should we reach that long-sought day of world peace with honor, we can thank the veterans whose sacrifices and devotion to duty—whose voices over the years clamored for a strong national defense—have borne sweet fruit.

But a bitter fate is threatened for many of the veterans of the 20th Century if there is no reversal of trends affecting the benefits their services have already earned. By the year 2000, just nine years from now, there will be 9 million veterans age 65 or older. While most of them will be able to meet their health care requirements and expenses, there will be thousands upon thousands who will be the poorest and sickest of our entire population.

And if current trends are not reversed in health care benefits for veterans, when they turn to the nation for the health care they need—the health care they have earned through their service—that care will not be available to them!

Is this the way a nation, supposedly grateful for the wartime services and sacrifices of her veterans, will care for these men and women in their sunset years?

On this Veterans Day, 1991, let us do more than salute the 29 million Americans—men and women—whose honorable service in defense of the national purpose is the highest calling of citizenship. Let's make sure that there is a strong veterans' health care system to care for the oldest, the sickest, and the poorest of those who answered our country's call and defended with honor her purpose.

CUSD incumbents win in Nov. 5 election

By JOHN DETRO

BALLOTS BECAME boots and bouquets, kicking out some incumbents while expressing faith in others. So said vote totals finalized and released Wednesday by Monterey County Elections Office.

Exact figures from Tuesday's locally-pertinent races — Carmel Unified School District, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, Pebble Beach Community Services District, Monterey Peninsula College Board — may be found in the detailed graph offered by this edition of your Pine Cone (page three).

CUSD returns gave firm victories to the three incumbents — Patricia Condren, Hilton Bialek, Gary Gray. Challenger Jamie Warren trailed them significantly as the race drew a 33 percent voter turnout.

"I'm quite pleased," board chair Condren said Wednesday. "I think it was a very clean election. I think that Jamie was a good contender. And I believe the school district will get along well with our new superintendent (Vance Baldwin), in whom I have a lot of faith."

Top priorities expressed by her: "The parking lot at Monastery Beach (this issue affects Bay School), the drop-in daycare problem, replacing computer equipment at Carmel High School."

Just before Election Day, Bialek said the board had "restored a high level of morale in the school system" following 1985's often bitter recall vote. Gray cited improved teacher salaries and an "extremely strong" fiscal position.

The 46.8 percent turnout in Pebble Beach Community Services District snubbed two incumbents — David Sprenger and George Murphy. Winning four-year board terms were William Gianelli, Wesley Bailey, Philip Fields.

Gianelli compiled the most votes (18.6 percent). Panelist John Strong had retired, opening up the third chair. A major issue facing the new board was the firefighting capacity of the district's water supplier.

MPC board president Caroline Page won along with education professionals Jim Philpot and Robert Infelise. Page thus will serve her second term. District voters notched a 25.8 percent turnout.

After a generally quiet campaign all-around, Pacific Grove businessman Rod Wallace couldn't claim one of the three open seats. He got just 11.6 percent of the vote.

David Leland contributed to this report.

Pacific Meadows occupancy stalled; residents await decision

By SUSAN BECK

Residents planning to move into Pacific Meadows this month will have to wait.

The 200-unit retirement community in Carmel Valley needs a Certificate of Occupancy that is being delayed because there is no landscaping plan for the project.

The project's architect, Ray Parks, said that off-site landscaping plans were approved Oct. 30, 1989, and on-site plans were approved Feb. 30, 1990. He said that May 20, 1991 the Sierra Club became concerned about the project, which subsequently led to a re-evaluation by the county.

"The county stopped up dead in our tracks," said Parks.

At the Monterey County Board of Supervisors meeting Tuesday, Nov. 5, the Forest Management Plan and Botany Plan were finally approved. Parks said he can now develop a plan which will be ready for approval by the end of the week.

The board also decided to approve treating Pacific Meadows as a residential project rather than commercial. This will allow for a bond to be posted which will enable and insure that the landscaping will be done over a period of time. Otherwise, the landscaping would have to be finished at the time of occupancy.

Landscaping comes under the jurisdiction of the Monterey County Planning Commission which handles environmental issues. But until the planning commission signs off with its approval, the county's building department can't give its final approval even if all of the conditions have been met.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman said she had recently indicated to the Pacific Meadows contractors that their occupancy date of early November was not realistic.

The supervisor had gone as far as to make inquiries to see if some appropriate housing may be provided for the people who have come to the peninsula anticipating to move in this month.

Parks said that several people who were notified that they could move in during November are staying with family or friends on the peninsula.

However, some of the future residents of Pacific Meadows are in a precarious situation. Monies that were to be used to move in are being spent elsewhere to accommodate the delays.

Jerry Warren, vice president of development, has set up some form of financial assistance for the inconveniences, said Parks.

He said that Strasser Kauffman had gone the extra mile to make sure the project gets clearance, and she is doing her best to have everyone get along.

He is referring to the recent debates about the the color scheme of the buildings at Pacific Meadows, which are green and blue.

Ed Haber, owner of the Quail Meadows housing project just across the valley to the south of Pacific Meadows, has strongly objected to the blues of two of the three-story buildings directly in view of his lots, which will be up for sale in January.

Maintaining that the colors are in violation of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, Haber worked with Parks and the county to come up with a plan for finding additional funds to tone down the colors, to make the buildings blend in with the environment.

At the board meeting Haber said he has decided to offer a financial gift to paint half of the two buildings that he considers well outside the perimeters of the valley's master plan. The cost for paint will be about $25,000.

He said that he would like to paint the building right away, yesterday, in fact, but decisions on the new colors must be

Tempers flare at city council

By DAVID LELAND

SPARKS FLEW again this week between Carmel City Council members and residents, concerning a new ordinance redefining the appointment process to the Carmel Planning Commission.

Upon its second reading (3-1, with Mayor Jean Grace dissenting), the ordinance became law. The bill's essence centers upon attempting to appoint members to the commission that would ostensibly represent a wide breath of citizenry.

Under the ordinance, if possible, the commission would be composed of a licensed architect, business owner, retired merchant, non-property owner, but no more than three business members.

Previously, the mayor would bring a nomination to the council that she believed would best represent the city.

However, even before the measure's ink was dry, some testified that they believed the matter should come before the people for a vote.

"I think something as important as this should be on a ballot," said longtime resident Glenn Leidig, who noted that the previous process had served the city well for more than 40 years. "I would hope that would be the way that it would happen."

Opponents of the ordinance have 30 days in which to request a referendum vote.

"People in this community do not want (appointment) criteria; it's restricting the process, the flexibility is being eliminated," said Carmel Cultural Commissioner Antonia Verleye, obviously taken aback by the council's reluctance to bend to public sentiment. "The council is not listening to the people."

Carmel resident Don Kramer also testified against the adoption of the ordinance.

"I think we may be shooting ourselves in foot," he said. "I think we're limiting our options."

And while the council majority said they believed that the new ordinance merely offers guidelines for appointments, Grace said she is already feeling handcuffed.

"I feel the council needs to have the ability to choose the best person no matter what they do for a living," she said.

But Councilman Ken White said that the absence of a "balanced" commission can offer uninformed decisions.

"I feel fairly positive about this," he said, adding that he served as planning commissioner on a body that had no architect. "I'm willing to go along with this; I'm willing to try it."

Councilman Jim Wright, however, lambasted Grace for painting the council majority as zealots.

He told Grace that he resented her implication that the council majority would let "Bugs Bunny serve" to satisfy their mandate.

Grace than jokingly chided Wright that maybe they wanted Bugs Bunny to serve on the planning commission.

Council wrap-up

Hatton Canyon debated

THE FOLLOWING are the highlights of the Nov. 5 Carmel City Council meeting:

• After hearing public comment, the council directed staff to prepare a letter to Caltrans requesting a supplemental environmental impact statement for the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway.

The council heeded its consultant Wilbur Smith Associates' advice in concurring that the final environmental document "does not fully evaluate the range of reasonable alternatives to the project."

The consultant suggests further exploring the widening of Highway 1 to four lanes and exploring how further public transportation could help alleviate traffic on Highway 1.

The council also decided to support dropping the motivation of achieving a level of service "C" for the Highway 1 corridor.

During the meeting Skip Lloyd, who represented Hatton Canyon Coalition, hinted that legal action against the project may be a necessary course to follow. The council took no position on that matter.

• Unanimously approved a resolution extending one-hour parking zones in the commercial zone during the Christmas season to two hours.

The applicable dates will be from Dec. 6-24. Carmel Business Association Executive Director told the council that she will make every effort to stop employees from parking downtown, so shoppers can take advantage of the longer time.

• Councilmembers unanimously approved Mayor Jean Grace's nominations to the Forest and Beach Commission.

John Creighton, who currently serves on the commission was reappointed. Bob Kohn was named to fill the seat being vacated by Jean Dahlstrand, who wished not to be appointed to another term.

A third vacant seat is scheduled to be filled during the council's December meeting.

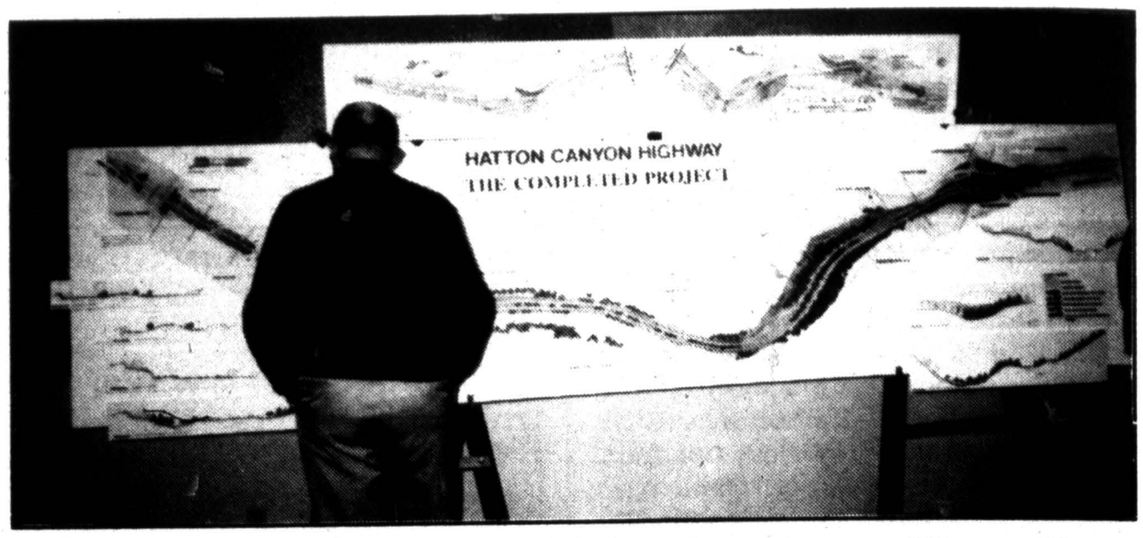
• Heard a report from City Atty. Don Freeman indicating that the city is moving forward with its enforcement of the transient rental ordinance.

To that end, all property owners within the city will receive a letter informing them of the court's decision upholding a city ordinance banning short-term rentals of less than 30 days in the R-1 district.

Moreover, legal advertisements will be placed in local newspapers.

Freeman added that the city will post signage on properties currently violating the ordinance.

• The council voted to conduct its monthly meeting in December on the 10th, rather than the 3rd, which will allow staff time to prepare the packet after losing work days during Thanksgiving.



PLANS FOR proposed Hatton Canyon freeway undergo public scrutiny.

Rehearing requested by Ewing

A PETITION for rehearing has been filed in the 6th District Court of Appeal by plaintiffs disputing Carmel's transient rental ordinance.

Earlier this month that same court upheld a Carmel law forbidding rentals of less than 30 days in the R-1 district. About 300 short-term rental homes are affected by the law, which carries with it a maximum fine of $500 a day.

The plaintiffs, John Ewing, et al., have alleged that the law violates their Constitutional rights on a variety of levels.

The city prevailed in Monterey County Superior Court and again at appeals court. The plaintiffs could ask for a hearing at the state Supreme Court of federal Supreme Court.

Plaintiff attorney Mike Masuda, in his brief requesting a rehearing, cited three misstatements of material fact surrounding the case.

• The city's general plan was referred to in the trial, but was never introduced into evidence.

• A figure used by the court indicating that 12 percent of the homes in the R-1 district were not occupied by permanent residents was not backed up by hard evidence.

• The decision states that there are about 950 transient units in Carmel, which is also not backed up by hard evidence.

"A court may grant a rehearing if its decision contains material misstatements of law or fact," Masuda said in his brief.

The heart of Masuda's argument centers on case law that says ordinances must accomplish either a compelling public need in the least intrusive manner or that it was rationally related to its purported goals.

Voice of Carmel poll suggests resident opposition to council

By DAVID LELAND

THE LATEST Voice of Carmel survey indicates that a large portion of respondents vehemently disagree with a number of the Carmel City Council's policy decisions.

The citizen based, non-political group polled 3,584 registered voters and 1,368 nonregistered property owners earlier this month. A total of 1,114 survey postcards were returned, representing a response rate of 22 percent.

The result: A whopping 361 respondents, or 60 percent, opposed the council's new procedure of appointing planning commission members, while only 241 , or 40 percent supported the plan of attempting to appoint commissioners according to their vocation or property status.

"Participants support the city's long-standing appointments policy in which the mayor has exclusive nomination authority in sharp contrast to the newly adopted policies and restrictive membership criteria adopted by a council majority at its Oct. 1 hearing," said Olof Dahlstrand, president, adding that the majority is composed of councilmembers Barbara Brooks, Ken White and Jim Wright.

Mayor Jean Grace told the Pine Cone that while she took the survey "seriously," she found fault with the group polling non-residents.

"Opinions are worth something because they are human beings," she said. "But they are not a part of our community."

Respondents also took issue with the council's further development of the First Murphy Park, with 674 respondents, or 63 percent opposed, and 251, or 24 percent in favor of moving ahead with plans. Last May, a similar survey found that 69 percent of the respondents were opposed to the city spending $335, for development of the First Murphy Project.

"These new results confirm that the community...still does not support the project," Dahlstrand said. "Accordingly, we hope that this project will be revisited by the council and that it will take whatever action is appropriate."

Five-hundred and fifty, or 50 percent, of those surveyed found Carmel's general plan section that backs a Hatton Canyon solution to be acceptable, while 405 respondents, or 37 percent backed a widening of Highway 1. Moreover, 135, or 12 percent, said nothing should be done.

Voice of Carmel member Howard Nieman, Jr., said that the limited results give a reasonable impression of city sentiment.

"It's the closest we can come to having an election without having an election," he said. "We're giving everybody a change to respond."

Voice of Carmel officials say they are worried that the council is erroneously moving forward on critical decisions with out the backing of residents.

"Overall, our two surveys disclose that the council's decisions on several major issues are not supported by a majority of survey participants," Dahlstrand said. "It may be appropriate for the council to reflect on whether its vision, actions and policies are consistent with the public interest and to encourage broader-minded public participation in the decision-making process.

"We believe the city council's fundamental responsibility is to make decisions which are in the best long-term interests of the community. Those decisions should reflect the vision and perspective of all segments of the community, not just those attending council meetings or who express themselves in other forums."

Grace said she is sure the council will pay attention to the survey's results.

"If nothing else, it makes us stop and think," she said. "You have to give it some credence and you have to give it some thought."

Commercial zoning report offers unusual suggestions

tinction. Apparel is treated as local serving...certainly there are more apparel stores than residents of this community can support."

The study also cites changing demographics in Carmel that show many people (30 percent of housing) are using the community for their second home.

"The size of our resident community cannot support the kinds of businesses that provide household goods and services," the report said. "Too much energy has been spent on the elusive concept of resident serving businesses. This policy has not improved the quality of business nor has it controlled the impacts of parking in residential neighborhoods."

• Streamline the method used to classify land uses. Currently the city has 158 separate land use categories, with many having no importance to Carmel.

The planning commission suggests reducing that number by half, which would simplify the administration, provide more flexibility and remove artificial distinctions.

• Simplify the approval process for commercial uses by reducing the number of conditions.

The commission believes that routine standards could be used as factual determinations by staff. But some uses that would affect the community would still be determined by the commission.

• Remove Ocean Avenue Overlay District.

The current land use regulations require a conditional use permit for all uses located in a building fronting on Ocean Avenue. And while this law was formulated to prevent chain stores, the use permit process has not accomplished this.

"This requirement is unnecessary, but special attention should be given to Ocean Avenue," the report said. "Instead of use permit requirements, some special design review provisions should be developed."

Speakers to address problems facing city

A LIVELY, perhaps controversial, discussion is expected to take place when five local speakers address the topic "The Problems Facing Carmel-by-the-Sea and Possible Solutions" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 7, at the Carmel Woman's Club, San Carlos and Ninth.

Sponsored by the Carmel Residents Association, the forum will feature, in alphabetical order, Neal Kruse, chairman of the 2016 Committee; Paul Laub, businessman and publisher of Freedom of Speech newspaper; Barbara Livingston, director of the CRA; Gary Luce, president of the Carmel Business Association and chief executive of Inns by the Sea; and Howard Neiman, former member of the Carmel Planning Commission and a founding member of the CRA.

Benevolent mission

YOUNGSTERS AT Carmel Middle School got in the Christmas spirit of giving early, making wooden planters that were sold in the Friends of Hospice Christmas Bazaar. The project is a part of industrial arts teacher Scott Ranier's art class, the students (shown here, clockwise) include Erin Miller, Jean Paul Hill, Dashiel Nemeth, Oscar Gurrero, Ato Ito, Jordan Stiles, Jamie Silva, Sadie Thomas, Lynn Daminano and Kristy Mills, joined Hospice representative Ned Prothro. Proceeds from the fund-raiser will all stay in the community and be used to help patients of Hospice. The wood for the planters was donated by Haywood Lumber, while the plants were donated by local nurseries. (David Leland photo.)

What would your life be like without a free public library?

QUESTION POSED to the public: "What would your life be like without a free public library?"

ALEX ALEXANDER, avid reader/outreach user: "Books are like a second life to a handicapped person. It would be a great loss for people who love reading. It would be a blow to people like me, as reading opens doors to the whole world."

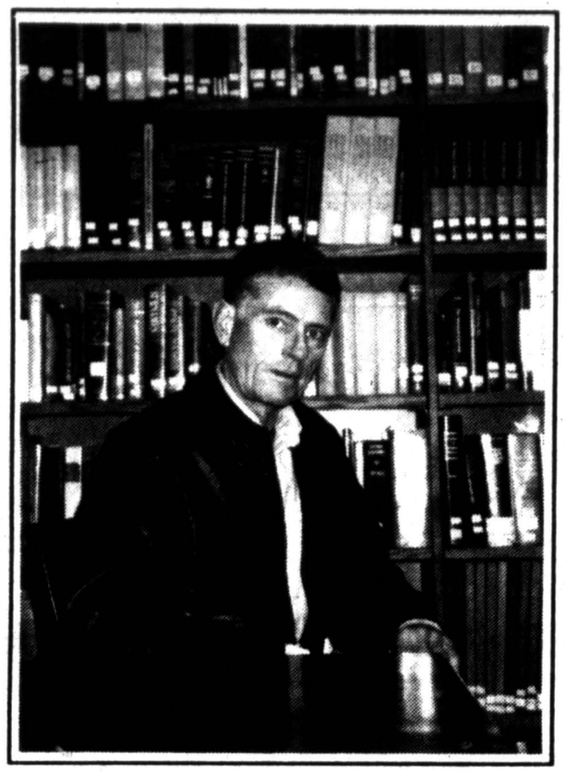
PAUL PLAMONDON, landscape gardener: "I think one of the greatest things about our library is its free interlibrary loan service. Without this program, there are so many books I could never read and enjoy."

These comments given to the Pine Cone offer a glimpse of the services offered by the Harrison Memorial Library that extend beyond the library walls.

Did you know the library takes books to the homes of individuals who are physically unable to visit the library? Each month, librarians and volunteers deliver books to approximately 45 shut-ins in our community. Library visits and books are "second life" to many physically challenged individuals. Home book service can easily be arranged by calling outreach librarian Lani Fremier at 624-4629.

Mrs. Fremier comments, "I really enjoy coordinating outreach services. Often, my outreach patrons say, 'It's a red-letter day when you arrive for a book visit'."

When it isn't convenient to come in for library service, many library users call the reference department for answers to their questions. Last year, the library's reference department answered approximately 19,000 questions. Head of reference services, Pamela Jungerberg, emphasizes that the reference department strives for a very personalized service. "Our goal is to give each individual the information necessary to deal with life's complexities."



PAUL PLAMONDON, landscape gardener: "I think one of the greatest things about our library is its free interlibrary loan service. Without this program, there are so many books I could never read and enjoy."

The library regularly provides information on wills and living trusts, consumer affairs, employment searches, and medical, legal and investment information. If the information needed exists outside the library's resources, the Harrison Library can consult the Monterey Bay Area Library Cooperative (MOBAC). MOBAC's reference and interlibrary loan service supplies libraries with information from other sources on the peninsula, throughout the state and across the country.

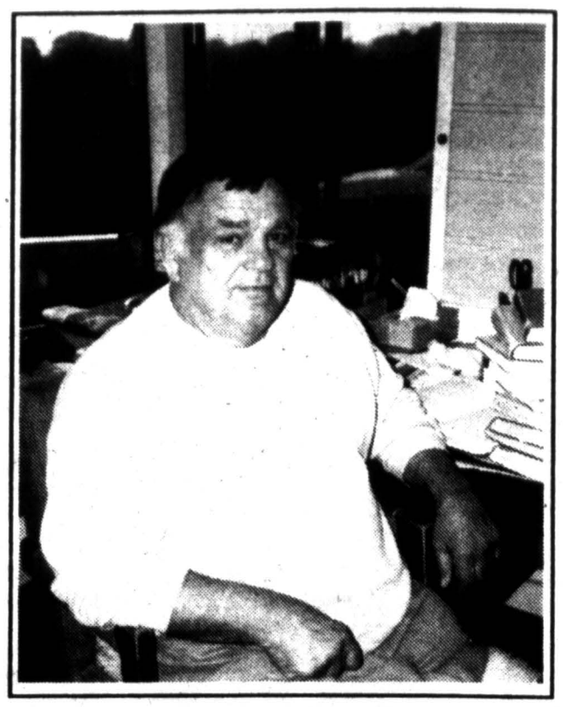
Harrison Memorial Library users are sophisticated readers. Often, their reading interests go beyond the 80,000 books in the library.

Interlibrary loan assistant, Eleanor Cox, commented, "I'm amazed at the wide variety of our patrons' interests. It's a bit like a treasure hunt to find just the book that meets the reader's needs." Via MOBAC's interlibrary loan service, Mrs. Cox delivers more than 2,000 books from other libraries directly to the Harrison's voracious readers.

Library Director, Margaret Pelikan, remarked, "This interlibrary loan service is vital since Monterey County funding reductions have cut our book budget by 50 percent. We'd love to have more current books available for our readers, but that's not financially possible at this time."

The Carmel Public Library Foundation's annual campaign, running from now through Dec. 9, intends to solve this problem. Approximately 10,000 households in the Carmel area have received annual campaign brochures announcing, "Your library needs you!"

Foundation annual campaign chair Don Kremer states, "Gifts to the Foundation's annual campaign go directly to the library's diminishing book and program budget. With our community's help, I know we can maintain quality services at the Harrison Library.



ALEX ALEXANDER, avid reader/outreach user: "Books are like a second life to a handicapped person. It would be a great loss for people who love reading. It would be a blow to people like me, as reading opens doors to the whole world."

approved by the county, which may take some time. Haber is also donating plants to assist in the projects landscaping endeavors.

Parks said that he is thankful for Haber's gift, but it doesn't resolve the problem because the money situation with Pacific Meadows is still the same, there isn't any. He said that perhaps some other generous gift will be donated to cover the cost of the other half of the paint.

Haber said he believes that with help from the county, Pacific Meadows will find the additional money to repaint their buildings.

Parks also said that the two projects are diametrically opposed— Pacific Meadows is a non-profit housing project, and Quail Meadows is specifically for profit. He said the colors were approved, but he is willing to work out another color plan that will satisfy everyone. Parks said he wishes Haber's project well and is sympathetic with his efforts to sell lots in this economy.

Strasser Kauffman said the Pacific Meadows color scheme is outside the process of opening the doors for occupancy. The green and blue buildings were approved and will not hinder residents from moving in when the planning commission and building department inspections are giving the final signoff.

She said it is reasonable to assume that the Certificate of Occupancy will be issued when the landscaping plan is approved.

Don Yule, a Pacific Meadows retirement counselor, said that about 100 people were planning to move in throughout November. He and Betty Leverett, director of resident services, were both surprised by the delays, but are confident that the situation will be resolved soon.

Lawmaker seeks '92 interns

Congressman Leon Panetta invites applications from college students who wish to serve as interns in his Washington, D.C., office next winter. "Applicants for the unpaid positions," he says, "should be prepared to work there from January through March. Adjustments could be made for individual interns."

Interested students should call Panetta's local office or send a postcard requesting an application: Panetta, 339 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. He also needs interns for next spring and summer. They do research, writing, office support work — and are responsible for their own housing, transportation, other expenses in Washington.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Host Carmel and visiting Notre Dame split the number of possible first place results at six each, but depth was the real story as Carmel won 20 of 24 possible second and third place finishes on its way to a 116-67 victory completing an undefeated dual-meet season. There were twelve swims fast enough to qualify for the CCS Championship Meet. Carmel diver Janell Petalver completed an undefeated dual-meet season with her first place finish. The Padre team heads into the MTAL league championships with a 5-0 league and 6-0 overall record. MTAL divers were scheduled to compete in their championship event on Wednesday (11/6) at the Carmel pool. The swimming portion will be held at the Salinas Municipal pool on Saturday (11/9) begining at 10:00 am. Those who qualify for CCS by Saturday's meet will compete at the annual championships held next weekend (11/15-16) at Stanford University .

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Beware of Canine Bloat

DO YOU enjoy jogging after a hard day at the office? An invigorating run may help to relieve stress and clear your head, but it can spell DANGER for your Best Friend. Exercising just before or soon after eating can cause gas to form in your dog's stomach. Particularly in large dogs, the gas can become trapped and expand without being released, resulting in a condition called gastric dilation or "bloat."

The first symptom is a swollen and painful abdomen. Your dog may be restless and attempt to vomit. As his stomach continues to expand it affects the blood supply to his internal organs. His lungs have less room to expand and breathing becomes difficult. If the stomach twists it will cause further complications.

Bloat is a medical emergency. If you suspect your dog is suffering from it, contact your veterinarian immediately. To help prevent this condition, feed several smaller meals instead of one large meal, avoid feeding immediately before or after exercise, and don't mix drinking water with meals. Of course, my best advice is to leave your dog at home when you jog. Run with a human friend or listen to a Walkman for company. And later you and Fido can enjoy a nice, brisk walk together!

SPIC & SPAN LITTER PANS

A lapse in litter-box habits may be your cat's way of asking you to clean up your act. Many cats won't use a dirty litter box—and can you blame them?

Clean your cat's litter frequently. You should scoop out solid waste a few times a day and completely replace the litter at least once a week—depending on how many cats you own. By the way, have you tried the new litter that "clumps" when it gets wet? You just scoop out the wet litter and the rest stays dry. It's terrific!

Scrub litter pans with soap and water to keep them clean and fresh-smelling and dry thoroughly before refilling. Again, this should be done at least once or twice a week, depending on how many cats live with you.

Be sure to check the litter for indications of illness. Diarrhea and bloody stools, for example, could mean that your pet has parasites or other health problems.

FIRE RESCUE

In the wake of the tragic Oakland Hills fire, I shudder to think how many pets lost their lives. When a blaze burns as quickly and as ferociously as that one did, there is little time to ensure the safety of family pets. Outdoor cats are especially vulnerable because they become confused and frightened and often run away, never to be seen again.

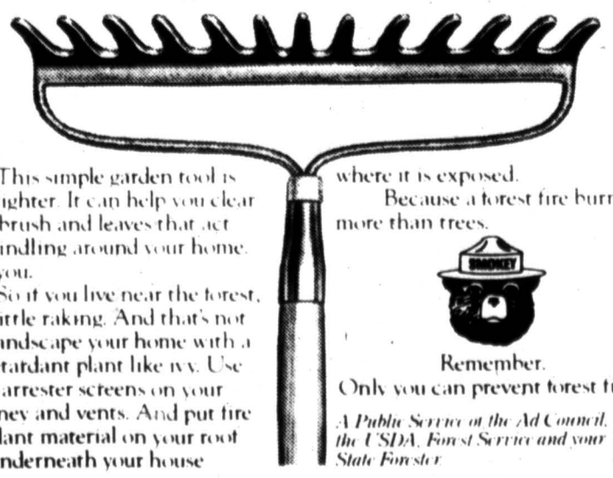
All of my cats are indoor cats and it gives me great peace to know they're safe from outdoor dangers. It doesn't take long for a kitty-cat to adjust to being indoors, and you can purchase a cat harness so he can still stroll with you outside. Also, if you 're handy you can build a cattery onto your home to bring the indoors inside. We have plans if you're interested.

To offer some hope for your pets in case of a fire, think about purchasing Pet Alert stickers. Displayed by your front and back doors, the decals tell firemen how many and what kind of pets may be inside. These stickers are available in pet stores and through pet supply catalogues. I strongly urge you to shop for some and choose a style that's brightly colored with enough space for each pet's name and description.

That's all for this week. See you next time!

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, Director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles)

HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.



This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Remember. Only you can prevent forest fires.

Valley residents slam controversial well-metering plan

BY FRANK GEORGE

WITH THE threat of litigation hovering over the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the board of directors left the controversial well-metering issue untapped at its Oct. 28 meeting.

"They're ready to fight," Nancy Lambert of Cachagua said of her area's small well owners. "They're ready to (keep district staffers off) their property."

The Cachagua Area Property Owner's Association member was one of several who spoke out against the ordinance, which was continued to the Nov. 25 meeting. The new rule would require all wells within the district to be registered and metered within 90 days of its passage.

(The cities of Carmel, Del Rey Oaks, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Sand City, Seaside, and portions of unincorporated Monterey County all fall within the district's boundaries.)

Existing wells that produce less than five acre feet per year and pumps on less than two and a half acres of land would be exempt from the ordinance, but once the land is sold, the well would need to be metered.

Citizens Water Awareness Committee (CWAC) founder Doyle Moses said "many spooks and ghosts and goblins jumped out of this thing" when he and his committee reviewed the draft ordinance. Moses presented a nine-point protest to the plan, saying his group felt "obliged to seek further legal advice" if it was approved as written.

District counsel David Laredo rebutted that most of Moses' protests were water rights issues, and "not germane to this discussion."

Yet accusations flew from the angry well owners. One speaker told the directors the ordinance probably hasn't "fully ripened," and "I'm surprised you guys actually want your jobs up there."

Real estate broker Ileene Franks questioned the ordinance's sale clause saying it could be "a real insult to injury situation" for local agents.

Elaborating, she said the last thing the recession-damaged industry needs is a stack of legal papers that might bog down a sale. This also drew a response from Laredo, who said the document clearly states that the selling owner is solely responsible for registering and metering.

Not surprisingly, the cost of the meters was also brought up. Plumber Stu Clough reopened that leak when he pointed out that reduced pressure valves (RP) will also need to be purchased by those who haven't registered their wells.

Clough said some RP valves have $1,000 price tags, and the additional cost may prompt some owners to hire cheaper labor. Unlicensed handymen may do substandard work that could do damage to the aquifer, he suggested.

Another hole in the ordinance was discovered by director Ken Long. The Pebble Beach resident pointed out that anyone can drill a well before next July without metering it until he or she sells it, which is unfair to other well owners.

Other arguments dealt with the amount of water involved and the number of people affected.

"You can hire more staff (to supervise the metering) and alienate a small portion of the population," water board candidate Joe Noto said. "If you want to really shake me up, you can pass this damned ordinance."

Darby Fuerst, district water resources manager, responded by saying 525 acre feet of water will be gauged if the ordinance passes, and less than forty owners will be affected.

Then he defended the district's stance by saying the 127 wells that are exempt only produce 220 acre feet of water per year, meaning the bulk of the district's ungauged water will be covered by the new rule.

Director Robert Franco, who also serves as the mayor of Del Rey Oaks, further defended the ordinance by pointing out that every mayor in the district supports its concept.

The issue will spout up again at the Nov. 25 meeting when the revised edition comes before the directors.

"We don't anticipate any litigation," District General Manager Jim Cofer said. "Clearly the district has the authority to pass the ordinance."

College Night set for Nov. 7

CARMEL HIGH will host its ninth annual College Night from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 7 in the school's gym

Representatives of over sixty colleges will be available. A panel presentation by University of California, California State University, and Independent School Systems will be held at 7 p.m. and repeated at 8 p.m. in the cafeteria. Students and parents of all Monterey Peninsula schools are invited.

Because of a typo in the original press release, it was first reported that the meeting would be held on Nov. 9. The correct date is Nov. 7.

Carmel Valley Outlook

Couple tickled pink about moving into Pacific Meadows unit

By SUSAN BECK

JACK AND Marilyn Klusmire have traveled all over the world and both agree that the Monterey Peninsula is still the most beautiful place of all.

This is their home, and they love it here, but the peninsula is one of the highest cost-of-living areas in the United States, which makes it difficult for many people to stay here after retiring.

The Klusmires don't have to think about that, however, because they will be moving into the Pacific Meadows Retirement Community in Carmel Valley, which opens in November.

The new 200-unit senior housing project, just past the mouth of the valley, is an opportunity for peninsula residents to maintain an accustomed style of living while not having to be concerned about the ever increasing cost of housing.

Like many people who have lived here a long time, the Klusmires passed up a chance to buy a home before the great price inflation of the '70s. They had considered buying a $38,000 condominium in 1978 while on leave from Klusmire's work in Europe, but decided to wait until they returned. When they arrived here in 1983 the same place cost $280,000.

"Now, at our age, there are few benefits in the long run for buying a home," said Jack Klusmire. "We are thinking long-term. Take a man's point of view. If something happens to me, Marilyn will be secure and she'll have a lot of people around who will be very supportive," said Klusmire.

"I feel that same way about Jack," said Marilyn Klusmire. "If anything happens to me, he will be in a wonderful place."

Pacific Meadows apartments range from $200 a month for studios to over $1,000 a month for two-bedrooms, but the rents increase or decrease based on the tenants current income status.

Don Yule, a Pacific Meadows retirement counselor, said that there are still several spaces available for peninsula residents. There are four studios, 44 two-bedroom apartments, of which 25 have a view of Carmel Valley and Point Lobos.

All of the applications for residency were sent out on Aug. 6. The opportunity to live at Pacific Meadows was based on who sent their application in first, said Yule.

Everyday at 4 p.m., Yule takes a group of future residents to the site to assist them in selecting an apartment.

"We have an outstanding group of tenants moving in, and we are very happy with the quality of people. They are active, enthusiastic, and eager to participate in their new community," said Yule.

Betty Leverett, director of resident services, said the project is going wonderfully and on schedule. She said the people she interviewed all agreed that a place like Pacific Meadows is long overdue on the Monterey Peninsula.

"It's a very good community for everyone concerned, the residents and the staff. Every part of it is just great," said Leverett.

The Klusmires agree that Pacific Meadows will be a beautiful place to live. Plans for Jack Klusmire's retirement included spending as much time as he can golfing at the nearby courses.

His wife, on the other hand, doesn't play golf, but she does play bridge. She and several of her new neighbors have already planned to get together. She also likes the shuttle service that Pacific Meadows will provide for residents who don't drive.

For many people, the idea of moving to a retirement community is disturbing. The Klusmire's were apprehensive at first, too, but are looking to the future.

"We're moving to Pacific Meadows, and it's going to be great," said Klusmire's wife. "We're going up the hill, not over the hill."

Fall has fallen

A CHILL in the air, cold toes at night, yellow birch leaves, and the aroma of burning wood drifting from stone chimneys...New England in the Fall? No...the Fall has come to Carmel Valley and more than 500 little ghosts and goblins ushered it in. Halloween was the annual Tularcitos Elementary School's Parade of Costumes. Villagers lined the streets of Carmel Valley to get a glimpse of their favorite Dracula or Cinderella as the parade wound its way through the center of the Village. Parents, teachers, staff, and the school principal all got into the spirit by disguising themselves as witches, clowns, ghouls, aliens, and even a Carmel tourist complete with bermuda shorts, shades, and camera! It was a day filled with pumpkin seeds, candy, thrills and chills

The Fall is a magical time in Carmel Valley. Although the weather is a bit brisk in the morning, the sun always pulls through to warm the day. Fall is a time of change so it is the perfect time to begin renovation of the Community Center. The tractors began their work this week and by Spring, the center will have new shaded picnic areas, widened walkways for wheelchairs and escorts, a redwood deck stage, and a remodeled building which all of Carmel Valley can be proud. This renovation project is funded by grants and donations from the Harden Foundation, AT&T Golf Foundation, Monterey County, the Upjohn Fund of California, the Marta Bennett Foundation, Mr. Willard Branson, and Dr. and Mrs. James Thompson as well as anonymous gifts.

Holiday hors d'ouerves will be the focus of a gourmet cooking class on Nov. 16 at the Community Center. It will be taught by Deni Curtis, Executive Chef at John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch.

The first activity at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center which marks the beginning of the Holiday Season is the annual Toy Fair on Dec. 7. Children from throughout Monterey County gather all the toys they've tired of and "rent" a table for $5. The toys are sold to other children, and those not sold by the end of the morning are given to charities. Kate McAnaney, past president of the center, started the Toy Fair four years ago. It was her intent to recycle toys while giving children the sense of responsibility to market, price, and sell them. The idea is to teach children how to manage their own money, and develop a sense of value. The Toy Fair attracts more than 400 children every year, and McAnaney said it is a fantastic opportunity for kids to clean out their closets and drawers and make some money on their outgrown toys and books, and on their already-mastered video games. For more information call Kate at 659-0382.

Be sure and mark Dec. 14 on your calendars now for the 33rd annual Carmel Valley Community Youth Center's "Santa's Fly-In!" This year the parade will honor Tularcitos' Elementary School's principal, Karin Camilli, as the Grand Marshall. The parade will also feature a 100 piece Kazoo Marching Band led by the Pointless Sisters.

For more information about the upcoming events call Kathleen at 659-3983.

Annual Harvest Faire set

THE 26TH Annual Harvest Faire will be held at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula in Carmel Valley on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 22-23.

The faire is sponsored by the church's Women's Association, and will feature holiday handcrafted gifts, decorations, jams, jellies, pickles, candy, baked goods and the "Judge's Famous Fudge."

The church is located one mile east of Hwy 1 on Carmel Valley Road. On Friday the faire will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on Saturday the hours are from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Peninsula Palate

By Wendy Brodie

A culinary journey

THE PENINSULA Palate is a culinary journey in which I would like you to explore with me the cornucopia of riches the peninsula provides; such as some of our colorful history, and bounties that have shaped what we eat and drink; our culinary artists, chefs and "foodies" and their secrets; gifts from the garden, and some tempting recipes. Journeys often run into detours, so some guidelines for kitchen sense, hints and techniques and answers to your questions are on the itinerary.

STARTERS: Even though 1992 marks Christopher Columbus's 500th anniversary of discovering America, I would like to backtrack to our native Indian heritage, for that is our foundation.

What better month than November when we are warming up to the celebration feast of Thanksgiving where we honorably recognize this heritage.

I am particularly interested because of the discoveries of Indian life at Rancho San Carlos. The burned stones from village cooking pits, with the ants unearthing bits of shells and bones that reveal their use of abalone and other shellfish from the coast, Tule elk and mammals that fortified their diet.

We shall take the first steps by looking at the life beginning with the beginning in the 1700's of the original "Peninsulans," the California Indians. Largely what is known comes from the observations and journals of the Portuguese, Spanish padres and early white settlers or travelers. They were known to have several language groups with well over 100 different dialects (for our area it was the Costanon language and Rumsen dialect).

The Indians were an "Acorn culture" living in their own well-defined territories, primarily being hunters and gatherers. Acorns were the main staple, they were converted into a year-round supply by autumn harvesting, invention of granaries (storage facilities, using woven baskets), and the creation of lasting processing (grinding and leaching of tannins with water) sites. It was eaten as a mush or gruel, breads or biscuits. Acorn meal was cooked in baskets with hot stones added to water.

The Indians reinforced their diet with wild grains, berries, fruits, pinon nuts, plants and insects. Hunting and fishing required skill and cunning with spears, arrows, traps, lures and disguises. Deer, Tule elk, rabbits, quail, squirrels, geese, ducks, pigeons, song birds and grouse were hunted. Salmon, abalone, clams, mussels, octopus, barnacles, fish, turtles and seaweed were treasures from the sea and streams. Grasshoppers and wasps were considered delicacies. Chia seeds were roasted and consumed as a high energy food, and wild greens were cooked, dried and stored for use in the winter months.

Although they obtained salt in various ways "it is said that Indian women would not eat salt for fear it would cause their hair to turn gray." Sugar came from particular reeds, bulbs and sugar pine sap. Just about all of the juniper bush was used, from seeds, bark, berries, roots, stems and boughs for food, medicine, detergent, jewelry and blankets. Before tobacco was cultivated, it was gathered in the wild and dried for smoking as well as extracting a juice that was added to intoxicating concoctions.

The Indians cooked in ovens dug into the ground or sand. Fire pits, the original barbecues, were round and about 2 feet deep, layered with stones, straw and oaks leaves and covered with earth. Sometimes another fire was built on top. Cooking utensils were minimal, flint or obsidian knives, gourds, baskets, some clay pots, wood and stone bowls, abalone and mussels shells and sticks were also used.

Although the eastern Indians showed the Pilgrims, during that brutal first year 1620 in Plymouth, how to plant corn and other native vegetables, that came later to the California Indians when the white settlers and travelers came bringing corn and beans, and with that the beginning of the Spanish missionary domination, the beginning of the "Corn Culture." in the West.

Were it not for the help of the native Americans we would certainly not be recognizing this yearly feast. This first celebration included pumpkins, squash, corn venison and wild turkeys, which have certainly made their comeback to California and Rancho San Carlos.

FIRST COURSE: Some facts and figures about wild turkeys. They are very special, more expensive and worth the try. They all have dark meat and a stronger richer flavor, tasting more like squab. They range in size from 7 to 10 pounds , figure 1 to 1-1/2 pounds per person, so perhaps it would be best to buy two to get those wonderful leftovers for turkey sandwiches. To cook wild turkey (unstuffed) place in 325-degree preheated oven breast side down on rack for 1 hour, then turn breast up and baste with juices and continue to cook for about 1-1/2 hours for until a meat thermometer reads 160 degrees-F or until juices run clear (12 to 14 minutes per pound). Cover and let rest about 30 minutes before carving.... Although it is not as traditional, many of us chefs cook the stuffing separately because we get a crisper less soggy stuffing and the bird cooks faster. Wild turkey meat is firmer and more dense and will carve more like steak.

Where to buy: Garzone's Market at 26340 Carmel Rancho Blvd., 624-2266, will be happy to special order with plenty of advance notice. Thanks Sam.

FINISHING TOUCHES: What do you do if you grab that tarnished copper serving dish at the last minute and find you are out of cleaner? Just run to the medicine cabinet for the toothpaste and apply with a damp cloth or sponge.

If you have a question, please write me at P.O. Box 221940, Carmel, CA 93922 and I will try to answer you.

(Editor's Note: Wendy Brodie, currently executive chef at Rancho San Carlos, has an extensive background as a chef on the peninsula, serving with such establishments as Simpson's, Cambridge Plan International, John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch, Stonepine, and Rio Grill. She is a graduate of the prestigious California Culinary Academy, is a member of the American Culinary Federation, Les Toques Blanche, Confrerie de la Chaine de Rotisseurs, Knights of the Vine, American Institute of Wine & Food, is a past president of the Monterey Peninsula Chef's Association and was named as that organization's 1982's Chef of the Year. She will offer her culinary wisdom to Carmel Pine Cone readers every other week.)

Watch out for the curve

TULARCITOS CURVE, approximately 17 miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road (G16) heading east, is a hairpin curve locals refer to as "Tularcitos" after the ranch it borders. The wheel-spinning, tire-screeching corner runs between two ranches, Tularcitos Ranch and Carmel Ranch Company.

People who drive G16 on a regular basis know how to slow down, graze their brake pedal, bank, then hit straight away with perfect synchronization. The corner's wide dirt shoulder allows neighbors room to pull off and let late-risers by on their way to town.

For the unsuspecting traveler, though, Tularcitos Curve is a rude surprise. Many rental cars have left streams of black rubber on the asphalt as their drivers attempted to negotiate the slide.

The curve itself is tricky, but the landscape adds another hazard. The driver heading east has just pulled out of the bend when, WHAM, without any warning, a vista that could qualify as a designated scenic outlook spreads off to the left as far as the eye can see. For the traveler heading westward on their way to the coast, Tularcitos Curve is smack in their face if they've let their eyes linger a fraction of a second too long on the scenery.

The reason? Anyone who has driven Carmel Valley Road is familiar with the natural beauty along this rural country road.

Especially the valley at Tularcitos curve. This spot would make a plein air painter weep for joy. Framed on three sides by rolling hills to the horizon, it seems to capture and hold the light. Soft browns, pinks and lavender play across the fields and hills.

This oak-studded essence of California scene stops travelers in their tracks no matter which end of the curve they're on.

—A young Hispanic man, shirtless and perspiring on a summer day, gazes out at the rows of hay bales shimmering across the valley floor. Then he turns, pushes off with his rubber tipped ski poles, and slides up the road on black roller blade skates.

—Same scene, weeks later. Artist Keith Lindberg and some colleagues stand in the grass bordering the approach to the curve, easels in hand, watching the light play across the hills.

—A few months before, a film crew shooting a car commercial had set up shop on the same spot. Huge halogen lights, reflecting mirrors and yards of cable had added another dimension for drivers trying to keep their eyes on the roller-coaster road.

The valley at Tularcitos is home to deer (one daily commuter once counted 10 bucks), wild turkey, a resident owl, and depending on the season, Canadian geese, mother cows and calves and an exotic herd of Brahma bulls. Cowboys ride through often and at least one amateur photographer a week records the scene.

It's a busy and beautiful scene. If you know what to look for, no sign of historic markers point it out—watch for the curve.

Carmel . . . As I See It

By Betty Barron

A week away

I CAME back to Carmel the other day after a whirlwind week in New England. First...I drove down Ocean Avenue...all the way to Scenic and around the Point and back up to Santa Lucia to the Mission, left on to Junipero and so to the Post Office.

I just wanted to be certain that everything was still here, in its right place. While traveling in the East it was a joy to browse the beautiful byways after following the jigsaw of downtown Boston.

The pattern there in Boston is even more bewildering that it was on my first visit over 50 years ago. The cars are like giant beetles in a maze; particularly as they buzz out of Logan airport into the beehive of north-south highways 3 and 93, and the junction of Memorial Drive and Storrow Drive as they race east-west along the lovely Charles River.

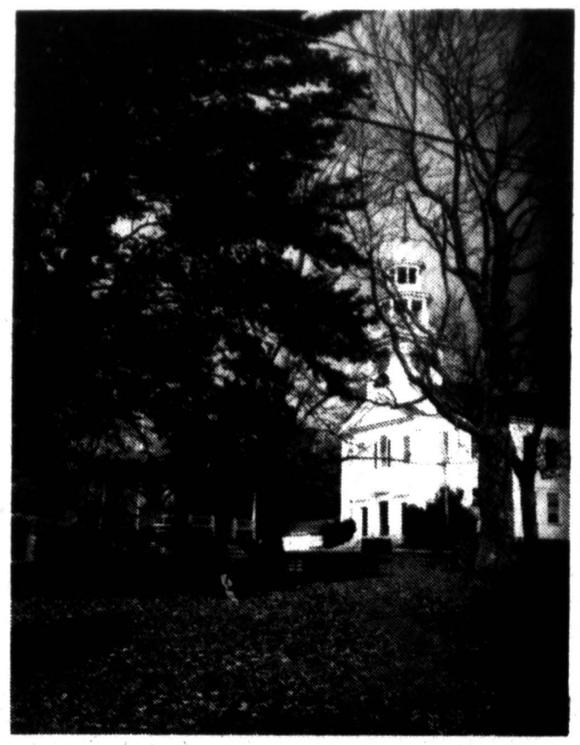
I pretended to be as oblivious of the traffic in Boston as I did this spring in the spinning top of the L'Etoile in Paris... and at the right moment I spun out of orbit, finally merging on to Storrow, heading for my hotel in Cambridge.

Well, enough of traffic talk for a moment. My purpose for going back East was a family reunion in Boston, but I gave myself a few days' leeway to visit Woodstock, Vermont and take in the famed fall foliage of New England.

The next morning I took the scenic route westward from Harvard Square through Lexington and Concord under a canopy of color, then north into a bit of New Hampshire, and across the Connecticut River into Vermont. It was like opening a book of dramatic photographs, turning the pages slowly.

Golds, reds, bronzes, russets...peach, plum, pumpkin...and a dozen apple shades...then wine reds, ambers, purples...spiked with evergreen, dark and shadowy.

The byways were furnished with multihued leaves that blew up against the windshield, quivering an instant in the sunlight. All this was a prelude to wonderful Woodstock...my first visit the Wandering off the Interstate on to highway 5 and into the quiet dignity of Woodstock was a step back into the 18th century. There was none of the bumper to bumper approach which we have down Ocean Avenue into Carmel from our high-speed trafficked Highway 1.



PATHWAYS OF fallen leaves point to The Village Green bandstand and white-painted church in Woodstock.

In Woodstock the roadway wanders past stately white homes, lawns splashed with fallen leaves, culminating in The Green, a slim oasis studded with magnificent old trees.

Set back and framed by a white picket fence and twin tall trees in the courtyard, the Woodstock Inn's portico offers a welcome and hints of a haven of quiet, substantial and enduring America. It was home at once.

A smiling doorman dealt with my luggage, ushered me up to the reception desk, summoned manager Jim Promo, and parked my car. My room overlooked the spacious lawn from bay-windowed dining room and reception rooms of the Inn to the bordering of bright tipped trees and the golf course beyond. luncheon was a sunny hour as I savored my first Eastern seafood in a long time.

Since I had promised myself to see everything, and knowing that I did not have time to play 18 holes, I walked a portion of the dramatically designed course, and turned back after seeing the tennis courts and the lower hiking trails.

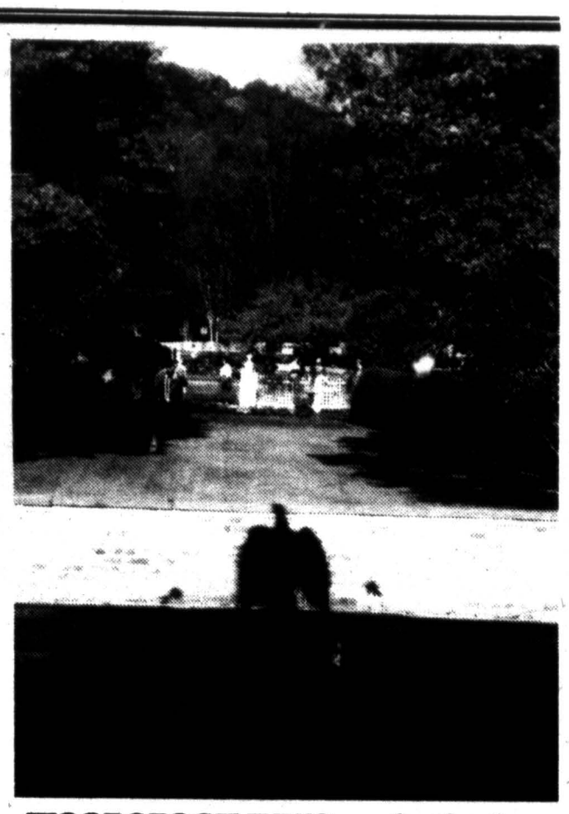
Just off the golf course an entire building is given over to the Woodstock Inn health center...pool, sauna, Nautilius equipment, tennis, squash and racquetball courts...even a restaurant, all rimmed by color, color, color as far as one could see.

Then, there was the Village. A few steps from the Inn past the Courthouse, a sturdy New England red brick building, and I was stepping into the Gallery on the Green. It was a microcosm of my wanderings through the lovely trees of Vermont's autumn.

Gallery on the Green shows only New England artists, whose palette is the colors of a blazing fire and the profile of their countryside. An inspiration.

The village shops were a blend of home-spun, quilting, woodworking, with antique shops interspersed with bookstores and small restaurants, the emphasis everywhere on quality and durability.



WOODSTOCK INN'S eagle shadows wall, looking out onto The Green.

Yes, Woodstock has a centuries-old feeling of the good life. Traffic is minimal. There are no delivery trucks clogging the streets, no parade of cars edging each other for space, no busy racetrack highway only a few blocks away.

Woodstock is almost isolated from the 20th century...secure against the 21st. It has allowed the Interstate its place along the deep Connecticut River gorge far from homes and citizens, a nice balance of beauty and tranquility.

What am I saying? I love Carmel. It has few faults. And, I came back to find that our one nagging traffic problem is finally going to be resolved. The scenic Highway 1 is not going to be freewayed through Carmel. The canyon is going to let the bulk of traffic dip down to the valley without disrupting the quiet of our village. And, tourists will come as they always have.

If we can preserve the charm and unique qualities of our village as Woodstock has done since the 17th century, revived in the 18th, blossomed in the 19th and 20th, and is ready for the 21st.

More on this soon...and on other New England villages I visited.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

'Real greatness'

OCT. 31 was Halloween, the eve of All Hollows or All Saints' Day when ordinary commons-a-garden good men and women are honored for their holy and saintly lives. Many people call themselves Christians but the real meaning of Christianity has missed them by a country mile. The world honors and considers men successful and even happy when they are rich and powerful. However, real greatness should be measured by what a man gives, especially when he gives of himself generously. He must also be gentle, patient, searching for peace in his own home, his community and in the world. He must be willing to give venturesome love which means he will be ready to get involved in a good cause, despite the risk. Most people look upon "saints" as plaster statues or stained glass windows, remote and detached, whereas they are really ordinary people doing their job in life and doing it well. Saints are ready to stick out their necks for others. Saints are easy to live with and enjoyable to be around. By the by, how does your halo fit these days? Is your harp in tune and are you playing in the right orchestra? Amen.

Research works.

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

American Heart Association

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

As a woman grows older, the most common threat to life is heart disease. It is the leading cause of death for women, at the rate of 500,000 a year. One way to reduce the risk of heart disease is to take off excess pounds. A study reported in the New England Journal of Medicine conculded that overweight was a factor in 40 percent of heart attached among women. The study pointed out that almost half of the women between 35 and 64 are overweight and consequently they are more vulnerable to heart disease.

Dorothy Frooks was the only woman in a graduating class of 300 at New York University's School of Law. That was in 1920, and she has been something of a legend ever since—in practicing law, running a newspaper she started in 1942 that covers her well-to-do Manhattan neighborhood, authoring 15 books and stepping out nightly to socialize. "I'm at a different restaurant or party every night," she told an interviewer. "I believe in keeping active...Retirement is a bad thing." She is proud that she was instrumental in the creation of New York's Small Claims Court in the 1930s, so that people without means could obtain justice. Until she injured a foot in a fall last year at age 91, she often spent one night a week arbitrating cases in that court.

Historic meeting of glass artists highlights opening

DEDICATED ALMOST entirely to art in flamework, the Crystal Fox Gallery, at Sixth and San Carlos, in Carmel, California will hold its grand opening on Nov. 9. Glass sculptors from the four corners of the country are represented and will be present throughout the day.

The resident artists expected to attend are Hans Frabel, Georgia; Robert Mickelsen, Florida; Paul Trautman, Oregon; Tlimand Marco Jerman, Ohio; Steve Gruba, Nevada; Bill Rasmussen, Utah; Milon Townsend New York; Joe Luisi, New Jersey; Lewis Wilson, New Mexico; and from California: Suellen Fowler; John LeJeune; Larry Brebes; Daniel Salazar; Kemp Curtis; Warren Hooper; Bob Hooper.

Each artist approaches this difficult medium with a style unique to him. Individually, each has achieved notoriety and has his/her works in private and corporate collections worldwide.

Known to each other by reputation only, this will be the first time these artists will meet. For the flamework community this is indeed an historical event.

Affected by a Renaissance in the early 1970's, flamework took a giant step forward. Young minds pushed aside barriers and rushed headlong into unchartered territories and gave flamework a new life in the form of glass sculpture. These artists have endured financial hardship, and public rejection of their work, only to rise above these barriers and achieve success. From third generation glassworkers, to laboratory and scientific glassblowers, college educated and the self-taught, each artist has developed a firm knowledge of his craft which they hope to share with others to further the acceptance of flamework as fine art.

The Crystal Fox Gallery presents an atmosphere of elegance designed for browsing. It offers something for both the collector and the casual buyer. Normal gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily and 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Sunday. Hours for the opening Saturday, Nov. 9th will be 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

THIS GLASS sculpture is one of the many featured at The Crystal Fox's exhibit of master flamework artists.

Gordo's gang may come to life on silver screen

By JOHN DETRO

EAT YOUR heart out, Batman. Gordo of the witty ways, wild tourist bus and bold eye for the ladies has begun his march toward the silver screen.

At least that's the desired end-point of a business arrangement between Kit Parker Films and Gus Arriola, Carmel creator of the beloved comic strip bearing Gordo's name.

Gus retired the colorful gang in 1985. Now, however, he has signed a letter of agreement with the peninsula production company for development of a "feature-length theatrical film with real actors — in the tradition established by the Batman and Dick Tracy pictures."

Announcing the pact via those words was Kit Parker partner David Bean, old media hand (see separate story) who spoke of Arriola and the project with obvious respect.

"Gus is an artist," Bean said. "He knew that we'd protect the integrity of his characters. It'll be an Arriola storyline incorporating every element of his humor and creativity. Kit and I will serve as producers of this live action film. We're at the beginning, holding creative meetings, clearing rights, developing the story and script treatment. Once the story's in hand, we'll approach actors and directors, gather up our package, then go to the studios for funding."

The 40-year-old Carmel Highlands resident added: "I see this project as being a year or two long — one year minimum but most likely two years. It's worth mentioning that Kit's father, the famed illustrator Al Parker, was a close friend of Gus's. Gus saw Kit grow up. As for Kit, he's one of the most caring businessmen I've ever met. It's a pleasure working with him and Gus Arriola. Feature length? That means it'll run between 80 minutes and two hours."

As usual, there was a smile in Gus Arriola's voice as we spoke. He made these points about the film project:

- "It's something I've had in the back of my mind for years. I've been waiting for the right persons. I think Kit and David are the ones."
- "I've always wanted it done with live actors. These were real people (in the strip), and I didn't want to animate."
- "Right now we're developing a presentation. I can tell you that I'm happy to be involved — the whole thing feels very good."

Bean said too that he and Pine Cone City Editor David Leland have signed a letter of agreement with Clint Eastwood for "a one-hour family film. I'm currently negotiating with HBO to produce."

The letter, Bean said, covers "up to six one-hour specials" with Eastwood "committed to hosting the program with an option to appear if a particular role meets his talents. The programs will be geared to families, reinforcing family values, ethnic diversity, self-esteem."

Bean said HBO's "buying the domestic TV rights" and "Fox/Lorber of New York has agreed to take the international rights." Right now Bean's working, he said, "to sell the home video portion."

Well-travelled David Bean has been creative force here at home

THIS FELLOW named David Bean, who announced the pact between Kit Parker Films and Gus Arriola for development of a feature film, has been a creative force hereabouts ever since he hit the Monterey Peninsula two decades ago.

He arrived in 1971 to be a disc jockey at the old KLRB-FM (downtown Carmel). Other career steps:

- During 1976-77 he was general manager and part owner of KZEN Radio, Seaside outlet which became KMBY-FM.
- In 1978, Mike Nesmith hired him as director of national marketing and promotion for Mike's Pacific Records in Carmel. "We started making videos to promote our records and became world famed for video production. We shot the pilot programs for MTV in Sand City. Very few people know this — after seeing our Pop Clips on the Nickelodeon Channel, Warner started MTV."
- At 1980's end, Nesmith shut down the audio operation. Bean became the first president of Pacific Arts Video, running it through 1985. He oversaw production, obtained world rights, put films on video disc and cassette. In 1982, he and Mike made Elephant Parts — which won a Grammy as "long-form music video of the year."
- Becoming an independent entertainment consultant, Bean worked with Paul McCartney in London, advising on acquisition, production, distribution. He also organized European distribution for National Football League films.
- An experienced feelancer in motion picture promotion, he was approached by the Monterey Film Festival board in summertime '86. "I was the fest's first executive director. We had until February 1987 to get ready. We ended up grossing nearly $300,000, which left nearly $50,000 net profit for the following year. I resigned, returning to business consultation in the entertainment industry."

DAVID BEAN

- October 1990. Bean became a partner at Kit Parker Films, 20-year-old distribution company. As managing partner for Kit Parker Video, he was back with acquiring and producing films to distribute on video cassette and cable television.
- Apart from Kit Parker, he has David Bean Associates in Carmel. There he continues consulting in the music, film and video fields.

Sollazzi to open exhibit of his oil paintings at Zantman Galleries

THE PUBLIC is invited to meet the internationally acclaimed Italian artist, Lucio Sollazzi, on Saturday, Nov. 9, from 4 to 7 p.m. at Zantman Art Galleries' Sixth and Mission street location in Carmel.

The galleries will unveil their 1991 solo exhibition of the works of Sollazzi, who is best known for his masterful and dramatic handling of light and shadow, with the immediated foregrounds of his works often in shadow, leading the viewer "into" the painting toward the brilliant contrast of light and dark beyond.

Sollazzi's love of authentic, simple things is evident in his paintings of local markets, charming old streets or young altar boys frolicking in a courtyard. Imagine an old balloon seller with white hair and moustache coming toward you holding a bunch of multi-colored balloons while a pair of altar boys rushes down the street to reach him, sun splashing on the old city walls contrasted by a grey leaden sky. This and many other lavish images are among the current new paintings in this exhibition.

VENICE: FLOWERS on the Balcony,* one of the works of Lucio Sollazzi now exhibited at the Zantman Galleries in Carmel.

Sollazzi has gained an international following with showings in Italy, Switzerland, Spain, Belgium, Monaco, and the United States.

Zantman Art Galleries have been showing his vibrant, poetic paintings exclusively in the U.S. for over a decade.

For more than 32 years Zantman Art Galleries has been one of the first stops on the fine art collector's list when visiting Carmel and Palm Desert. Representing over 75 artist from many corners of the world the galleries feature a broad spectrum of media and styles of painting and sculpture.

The exhibition will continue through the month of November. For further information: Helen Whitcomb (Sales Director), at 624-8314, or (800) 344-9359, or FAX 626-8408

Musical enrichment

THE LAST of the four inaugural concerts held to introduce and celebrate the acquisition and installation of the excellently proportioned new Schoenstein organ at the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel, was performed Sunday afternoon. Organist Ken Ahrens, a very well-known and appreciated musician, was the featured soloist The Monterey County Symphony Chamber Group under the direction of Maestro Clark Suttle played a prominent part in the musical festivities.

The program provided an opportunity to enjoy music which can seldom be programmed in a concert hall because an organ of the caliber of this one is usually not available anywhere except in a church of some substance. It is certainly easier to bring the musicians to the organ's home, than to bring the organ anywhere but where it is installed.

Opening the afternoon with a particular flourish, the Haydn "Concerto in C Major" Hob. XVIII no. 1 for organ, oboes and strings was a bright and pleasant work. Initially and for most of the first two movements, the orchestral tone blended so completely into the organ part that, from where I was sitting, they were almost inaudible. This was the fault of the orchestration rather than the players. The organ tone was bright and alive and the dynamic level was quite high.

In the Largo, when organ and strings alternated, the balance was fine. The spritely Finale also benefited from the balanced writing and the virtuosic solo organ part was very enjoyable.

The Handel "Concerto Grosso in C Major" was played with confidence and strength by the 12-member string orchestra. The tonal body was rich and warm. While hardly a refined performance, there was verve and vitality to be heard. It was a modern gloss on Baroque style.

A true rarity, the Mozart "Sonata in C Major for Organ and Strings" K. 328 turned out to be a brief symphonic movement featuring the strings, with the organ apparently filling in for the woodwinds and brasses. Even though Mozart wrote several of these works in Salzburg as interludes between the Gloria and Credo of the Mass, there was nothing very churchly or serious about this one. The strings got quite a workout and handled the thoroughly delightful music very ably.

Bennie Cottone, principal oboe of the Monterey County Symphony, was the accomplished protagonist in the Bach "Concerto in A Major for Oboe D'Amore" BWV 1055. The oboe d'amore bridges the gap between the oboe and the English horn. It has an appealing warm tone and was popular in the Baroque era.

Cottone's playing was smooth, seamlessly phrased and highly polished. He displayed a fine grasp of ornamentation and maintained a floating, sensitive melodic line which had distinctly vocal overtones in the Larghetto. The playing was highly authoritative and one wished for similar quality in the string accompaniment which simply wasn't present.

The closing work was Handel's "Concerto in D Minor for Organ and Strings" Op. 7, No. 4. This was a true virtuoso outing for Ken Ahrens and he took full advantage of it. His use of the wind and brass stops in the organ gave a truly celebratory and triumphant flavor to the music and to his performance.

This, in combination with a very strong orchestral contribution and some beautiful, richly toned viola playing by Ruth Meints made for a truly satisfying performance of a delightful composition and an appropriate conclusion of the welcoming ceremonies for another musical enrichment in our community.

Theater Review

By James P. Kinney

Something special

POINT OF Departure has a mischievous and infectious spirit. This is the comedy by long-time Peninsula resident Bruce Arris about the Big Sur "sex cult hoax" of the late 1940s.

Originally produced at the old Wharf Theater in 1951, the show's current revival happened because of an almost miraculous recovery of a single script that survived a disastrous fire at the playwright's Monterey home about a year ago. That and the tenacity of Director Jeremy Slate and his enthusiastic cast and crew.

Make no mistake. This is no local theatrical museum piece. It is instead a well-constructed, spirited comedy that deals with universal human themes that would apply anywhere.

Two national magazine journalists are sent out from the East Coast on assignment to interview Henry Miller, famous writer and at that time a resident of the Big Sur area. Miller, preoccupied with personal projects, suggests Bill Jackson—his unofficial assistant—deal with the out-of-town visitors.

Does he ever! Jackson and some equally puckish local residents concoct a steamy fictional tale of wild sexual activity and promiscuity in and around the confines of Big Sur.

The big city rubes buy the hoax lock-stock-and-barrel, rush back to New York, and in a short time the whole country is buzzing with the West Coast goings-on, supposedly under the tutelage of an author whose initial fame was based on his early autobiographical sex novels.

Despite some excellent individual performances, Big Sur itself emerges as the hero of the play. It is the place itself and its special spirit that is celebrated. Famous, self-important people coming from big, self-important places are always fair game for locals to exploit for the amusement of their friends. The rural Irish have done it for centuries. Natives of the Ozarks do it. Fooling outsiders qualifies, in fact, as an easily identifiable international sport.

The most prominent theme running throughout the play is of Big Sur itself as a special healing place, a haven where souls battered by the cruelties and crudities of the outside world can come for acceptance and a chance to heal their "broken wings."

Playwright Ariss is also saying that, for all their foibles and idiosyncrasies, people themselves are capable of magic and that they possess and exercise the ability to heal each other.

These are big-hearted ideas and they reflect the dimensions of the big-spirited human being who wrote the play. In several personal conversations with Mr. Ariss over the years, I heartily attest to this truth about this very special human being.

With a cast of 17, space does not permit mention of each member. But there were some memorable performances. Mark Hudson—using an effusive French accent—brings a passionate intensity to Paolo, the philosophical artist/dreamer. Mia Torres is a caring, warm-hearted Wanda. Rip Aquino is a tower of dignity and compassion as Don Andreas Escobar. Peter Stock, as Old Tom—the closest thing the show has to a "heavy"—makes even this troubled old man human and believable.

Kim Candler, the troupe's most experienced actress, is perky and appealing as Jessica Wylie. J. Perham Slate gives the play's most complex character, that of Dr. Jody, flexibility and believability.

The rustic main set, a combination of Ma Bronson's Tavern and Big Sur Post Office, wonderfully enhances the action. It was designed by Mickey Meunnig. Costumes by Denita Del Signore; make-up by Mike Doig.

"Point of Departure" runs a final weekend Nov. 8 and 9 at Big Sur's Grange Hall and then moves to the GroveMont in Monterey. See papers for times and dates. Tickets benefit the Bruce and Jean Ariss Rebuilding Fund. This is something special. See it.

Battle of the bands

THE GREAT Musical Booking Battle going on now between Monterey's Doc Ricketts' Lab and Santa Cruz' The Catalyst (see report in John Detro's Jazz Tides column in this issue), is really nothing new.

Back when the music scene was also flourishing on the peninsula (in the early '80s), The Club's owner Brooke Lewis took relish in taking on other club owners and bookers in a battle of bookings and contracts. He especially loved to slip in and sign up an act under the noses of the other owners and managers, who, after being burned a couple of times, took up the challenge. It sometimes resulted in acts getting paid way more than they should have been, but it nevertheless provided fodder for bragging rights on the peninsula.

Ironically that no-holds-barred aggressiveness and cut-throat competitiveness may have also effectively killed the music scene; none of the live-music-only clubs could stay afloat for long at the rate they were competing. Remember The Oz, The Cuckoo's Nest, The Old Monterey Music Hall, The Fog Bank, even the Mission Ranch Barn and The Hatchcover? Once thriving live music venues, only a couple (the renamed Fog Bank, now the Monterey Brewing Company, which is having problems of its own), continue to offer regular live music, most of that in the form of local bands.

Into that gap has stepped Doc Ricketts and The New Boiler Room, and on a smaller scale, Portofino Cafe in PG, to bring in nationally known music acts. Thus the current music scene, while not approaching the heights of the early '80s (yet, that is), is thriving once again. But for how long is anyone's guess. Let's just hope this current booking battle doesn't presage another demise of the music scene.

And in another ironic turn of events, Lewis, who abandoned live music at The Club a couple of years ago, has his occasional live shows booked by none other than Gary Tighe, who also books The Catalyst and is embroiled in the current brouhaha. Can Lewis be up to his old tricks again? They say that music goes in cycles, maybe the booking battles do too.

BOOGIE-WOOGIE blueswoman Deanna Bogart returns to Doc Ricketts' Lab for their Blue Monday blues shows, this Monday, Nov. 11.

The last time this fireball was in town she burned up the joint with her barrelhouse piano and R&B-influenced sax playing. This is only her second West Coast tour, part of which she's sharing with guitar slinger Johnny Winter. She's also appearing on this swing at such blues hangouts as JJ's in San Jose, Slim's in SF and The Catalyst in Santa Cruz. Check out her latest CD, Out to Get You on San Francisco's Blind Pig Records, it's filled with her trademark boogie-woogie style, some of it harking back to her days with the excellent Western Swing band, Cowboy Jazz.

The best way to hear her music, however, is live, where the energy and drive is almost palpable.

Authors-by-the-Sea

BIG AND good plans at Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library—

Award-winning authors Marcia Muller and Bill Pronzini will be the first speakers for that facility's lecture series entitled Authors-by-the-Sea. The kick-off will start at eight o'clock the evening of Friday, Nov. 22.

Place: the library's cozy reading room. Tickets ($12 apiece) now may be purchased at the library circulation desk. Library Director Margaret Pelikan says only 80 ducats will be sold (all proceeds going toward library book buys). "Light refreshments will be served following the lecture," she notes.

Mystery readers hereabouts will recognize Muller as the author of titles featuring Sharon McCone — including The Cheshire Cat's Eye and There Hangs the Knife as well as The Shape of Dread (for which she won the 1989 American Mystery Award). In 1990, Muller received a Shamus Award from Private Eye Writers of America — "best short story."

Pronzini's a prolific writer. Alone and in collaboration with others, he has published more than 40 novels. These include 18 of his popular Nameless Detective series. Bill has received two Shamus Awards and the Lifetime Achievement AwArd (1987) from the Private Eye Writers of America.

The series is expected to become an annual. Says Carmel's Bob Irvine, who thought of the series and helped line up authors: "We conceivably could have writers flying in from New York and London to appear here, because they love libraries."

Series speakers in January will be Sue Dunlap and Linda Grant. Tickets will be on sale the night of Nov. 22 at the library.

CALL IT a gentle tribute, obituary notice, whatever. The following was provided by photographer Chris Hulse:

K. Moze Fadeem — poet, playwright, journalist, Fanatic Gardener, painter, sculptor. An improbable person with an improbable story that only he would be able to tell.

Moze had lived on the Monterey Peninsula for about 10 years. A newcomer by some standards, but nevertheless a fixture among recent arrivals and old-timers alike. He touched many of us here as he percolated through the nooks and crannies of our social world. Now, to our sorrow and great loss, he will touch us no longer. He died Saturday, Oct. 19, from massive heart failure.

Moze was born Kenneth Moses Fadem in St. Louis on Sept. 12, 1935. He grew up and graduated out of high school there. From that time, the quest that dominated his restless mind took form. His life was full of journies as a seaman, history student at Columbia University, writer, artist. He carried little baggage, but always expanded his spiritual and intellectual boundaries.

The years in this area showed forays into playwright's

And what a delightful place. Owner Anna Binicos: "So many publishers shoot at the lowest common denominator. We're proudest of bypassing dross and finding the real gems in various fields." And our Special Order Service - anything in print - is quick."

New books, of course. Sale titles. Rather special emphases on psychology, women's studies, photography, literary classics. At 118 Webster near Monterey Post Office. Hours: 10-5:30 Monday through Friday; 11-5 Saturdays. 373-0228. Vibrant atmosphere.

skills (with a producation of his Jocasta on KAZU Public Radio), painting (work shown at several local venues), fine art photography (Pacific Grove Art Center). Then he published a body of work on gardening, plant growth, formal gardens — including an article on La Mirada for The American Horticulturist.

Perhaps these efforts are somewhat overshadowed in our memories by his earlier, more public adventures as the Fanatic Gardener. The persona started as a series of articles in this newspaper, then continued (modified form) as a series of KAZU broadcasts. He won many, many friends with his subtle, sardonic wit and earthy philosophy.

What wonders might this fertile mind have shown us? Moze Fadeem was a genie's treasure trove of projects to be shared with all. Those whom he touched in person shall sorely miss him. Philosophical interlocutor, artistic inspiration, soul mate, Moze the lover — these are gone now.

Relatives and friends shared a memorial service last Saturday at Pacific Grove Art Center.

WISE WORDS from the international poet Gloria Fuertes: "There is no language that contains words which are unpoetic. It is the poet who infuses everday or common words with the spark of high art. I use all kinds of vocabulary. I came from the people and I address the people and that's that. What I want most is for as many people as possible to understand me; I want the masses to read me. I don't write for poets. I don't write for erudite readers. I write for everyone. The very erudite readers and the very highly cultured people understand me just as the common laborer does. . .I admire a good sonnet, but I don't feel things in sonnets. Pure emotion doesn't happen that way because no one feels things in sonnets."

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Musical battle

WHAT COULD become a knockdown legal battle has erupted on the Monterey Bay Area music scene. Centerpiece in the long-simmering clash between major clubs — bluesman Albert Collins.

Owner Kelly Leonard of Doc Ricketts' Lab close by Cannery Row said he'll ask his lawyer to contact Gary Tighe, talent booker for The Catalyst (Santa Cruz), The Club (downtown Monterey), The Oasis (San Jose). "If a solution doesn't come easily," Kelly added, "I'll file suit. Gary's actions amount to restraint of trade. If I have to, I'll pursue a cease and desist order."

Lab booker Mike Evans puts the purported matter even more strongly: "Gary found out that Albert Collins was scheduled here so Tighe told the Collins management that their man had to play The Club or he couldn't play The Catalyst. It was a power move and a total infringement on our right to do business. It's our understanding that The Club will present Albert Collins on Nov. 14" (a point confirmed by Tighe during a telephone conversation from his Santa Cruz office).

Many days ago, Doc Ricketts' Lab announced that Collins would work there Nov. 18 as part of its new Blue Monday Series. That was done, Kelly said, on the basis of "a verbal agreement with his people. Then they asked for a date switch so they could play a club in San Jose (Albert was scheduled at The Oasis 11/18). We said OK."

The Lab's mailer then said Collins would be there Nov. 17. Obviously more than a little angry, Leonard told me last Sunday: "We won't have him at all. He cancelled. Gary Tighe ripped us off by giving Albert Collins three dates instead of one. It's totally not right. Gary's playing games with us. This has been coming for quite some time, but we've never been burned before. I'm not kidding — we'll go to court if the situation demands that approach."

Tighe responded that Kelly was "going after the wrong guy. He should go after the ones who offered me the act — Full Circle Talent Agency of San Francisco. I really don't know what his situation was with Albert. I probably wouldn't have much to say to his lawyer. Acts can go where they choose. I don't think he has any court case there."

Kelly said the rift began months ago "when The Catalyst lost money on two major acts that made money for us here. The Catalyst lost money because they paid the acts too much. That certainly wasn't our fault. Gary started putting a rider into his contracts with people — if they played Monterey's side of the bay, they couldn't advertise on the radio. Apparently he thought that radio spots made money for us while he lost money on the same talent. How ridiculous — we have a capacity of 250 and The Catalyst seats 800. We can't possibly affect what happens over there. Now there's this thing with Albert. It was Gary himself who told me that Collins would play The Club on Nov. 14 rather than our place on the later date. If Gary Tighe wants to slug it out in the courts, we're ready."

Meanwhile, that Blue Monday Series kicks off at Doc Ricketts' Lab next week (11/11). The spotlight will shine on Deanna Bogart, fiery singer who plays saxophone and keyboards. Also announced by Mike Evans: Blues mouth harp stalwart Jerry Portnoy (11/25) and mouth harp master Charlie Musselwhite (11/17).

The similarly new Sunday Afternoon Jazz Series will feature vibist Rob Lautz (11/10) as guest artist working with the quartet fronted by reedman and series booker John Cortes. No cover charge. Rob's a much-experienced pro from Santa Cruz; he has played scores of peninsula gigs and oversees the jazz education program at Kuumbwa Center.

WALLACE WORK—Local jazz photographer Will Wallace got this dramatic shot of tenorman Harold Land. A brand new, all-color show of Will's pictures opens early Friday evening (11/8) at Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz.

HIGH PRAISE—The exquisite interpretations of vocalist Weslia Whitfield have impressed critics nationally. She'll appear on Friday night (11/8) in the current Hidden Valley Music Seminars series.

Guitarist Bruce Forman opened the Sunday afternoon format in fine fashion, burning his way through Bird Parker blues, charming listeners with tasty bossa nova treatments. The swinging beauty produced by pianist John Donaldson simply gets deeper — he'll amaze even those jazz buffs who think they've heard it all. John Schifflet on bass and drummer Bob Blankenship contributed solid solos.

Youth Music Monterey again will sponsor a record giveaway as part of the Sunday afternoon festivities. Fantasy Records donated the albums (classic vinyl with Ella Fitzgerald).

IF YOU love tasteful interpretations of ballads, don't miss Weslia Whitfield in concert (11/8) for the Fridays at Eight Series shaped by Hidden Valley Music Seminars. The San Francisco vocalist has a way with lyrics that makes old warhorse tunes feel

Spas, Hot Tubs And Pools Prove A Balm To Aching Bones

Doctors often recommend a good soak in a hot tub or spa as a way for arthritis sufferers to smooth out the kinks during cold weather. It's the same remedy discovered by skiers after a vigorous day on the slopes to avoid "charlie horse."

For those wanting the benefits of some exercise, as well, an increasingly popular activity is "acquacise"—exercise done in the shallow end of a warm pool. Water acts as a support cushion, making it possible to realize the aerobic benefits of exercise with minimal stress. Accordingly, "acquacise" done in accordance with a doctor's recommendation can be of benefit to people recovering from injuries as well as to pregnant women, the elderly and the handicapped.

A person's physique, however, needs regular attention to keep it in good shape. So, too, do pools, spas and hot tubs. In order to simplify effective maintenance, Hydrotech Chemical Corporation has developed a line of easy-to-use brominated sanitizing products containing Clorfree® that have the added benefits of not giving off chlorine odor or causing swimwear bleaching.

Just as a judiciously used tub, spa or pool can reduce the strain of physical exercise, proper use of modern-day sanitizers can take the strain out of maintenance.
